

VICTORY AND REMEMBRANCE In the flush of victory, don't let us forget to remember. Our monument to the men who fought and died between 1914 and 1918 is this cenotaph — the monuments to the boys who are fighting and dying today are rows of little white crosses that dot the battlefields all over the world. Our job here is to erect a monument in Canada to those who are still fighting — a monument of Eighth War Loan bonds that will ensure they are adequately supplied with the tools of war, and make Canada a better home for those who will return.

PRIZE FOR LETTER

Each week The Times-Review is presenting a prize of $2 to The Canadian Legion Smokes Fund for the prize-winning letter of the week received from a Fort Erie service man serving outside of Canada.

The following letter was received by Betty Barton Anglin from her husband F/L Jerry Anglin with an advanced RCAF fighter squadron covering the British 2nd Army in Germany. It was written April 16 from Germany and received here May 1.

While we sweat and stew over armed recess (reconnaissance) and patrols, sometimes keeping so busy we hardly take a glance at the flying field itself, 100 yards away, there's another busy little outfit working like mad right down on the grass beside the strip. There's a cluster of tents, and great clusters of Dakotas floating in to receive long strings of ambulances that come rolling down from the little hospital in the town. The chief bossman, who acts as shipping agent, plane dispatcher, and occasionally runs out to wave one of his giant chicks away from a soft spot on the turf, is one guy that your hometown on the Niagara can be damn proud of.

Al Williams (Squadron Leader, and C.O. (Commanding Officer) of Air Evacuation Section 52, (RCAF) Mobile Field Hospital) is one of the hardest working and most conscientious guys in this war. He's got that grand mixture that seems to characterize the Canadian style of doctor — the so many good lads we know; a mixture of scientist, impassive horse-doctor, and blunt talker who likes to be just one of the boys — when he gets a moment. At least, I presume Al does; he certainly hasn't had any time since he's been here. He moved in one day at noon, got his tents up, first Daks in at 4.30, shipped out 200 casualties in seven kites, and I found him standing, just a bit tensely, by his tent wherein his supper was getting cold, watching the last one take off with scarcely more than its navigation lights to be seen as it thundered away through the near-dark.

This is the eleventh spot at which he's set up shop since landing on the continent last June. Tell the councilors that if they want to hang another wing on the town hospital and call it the Williams Memorial, it's okay with me and this citizen-by-adoption will gladly kick in a war bond.

HOME AFTER FIVE YEARS Sgt. Murray Glover, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Glover, of Gilmore road, has returned home from five years overseas to spend a 30-day furlough before leaving for the Far East for instructional purposes.

DIES AT SEA One day after the Japs threw in the sponge, Able Seaman Elmer William Dranger died of disease aboard USS Vicksburgh, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Dranger, 102 High street, were advised by the U.S. Navy. His death occurred on August 11.

Must Guard Against Mistakes Of Our Fathers, Says Malkin

Ft. Erie mayor claims those running League of Nations failed; Memorial service

PORT ERIE, Nov. 8 (Special)—
"We must guard against the mistakes of our fathers. The Treaty of Versailles which ended the last war was not wrong; it was the people who administered it," declared Mayor William T. Malkin at yesterday afternoon's big memorial service, speaking on the subject: "Fort Erie Remembers," just prior to the new Ontario Minister of Labor, Hon.
Charles Daley, of St. Catharines.

In a thought-provoking vein, His Worship continued: "The League of Nations was not a mistake, nor an unworkable instrument. It was the people who failed to carry out the covenants solemnly pledged therein, who were wrong. The Italians for instance were allowed to attack and commit terrible depredations in Ethiopia, one of the oldest Christian countries in the world; the Japs were allowed to invade Manchuria.
Gallant China was left to fight alone for more than seven years.
There cannot be peace nor justice and brotherly love in this world unless we have such qualities within ourselves," concluded the mayor.

Participating in the pated was dian Legion, Branch 71, Fort Erie, land regiment under the command sident Edward R. Kingsley opened
